

To whom it may concern:

It is my honor to speak about Carson Racich's work ethics, her character and devotion to her passion for golf. I have been fortunate to be Carson's golf instructor for the past 13 years. Carson is a special pupil. She is truly in love with the game of golf. I can never give her enough swing information or golf history. She really eats, sleeps and lives golf. A typical day for Carson during her high school years went something like this. She awakes and starts her golf stretches and exercises. She may then go to the golf course and play 9 holes of golf. She follows that with a short game practice session, followed by lunch. Then off to the golf course to play an afternoon 18, followed by supper and off to Aldeen to hit some golf balls and practice some more. If the weather is inclement, she may watch golf on TV, read about golf or give me a call to ask me a question about something we are working on with her swing. I have never has such a devoted student. During her high school years she volunteered her time to assist me with my PGA Junior League team.

She has been selected to the ALL-NIC-10 Girl's Golf team her junior and senior year during high school. the last two years. Carson is also a perfect behaved lady on and off the golf course. She gives more of her time to the game of golf than any other pupil I have ever coached. Her first year at college her coach said she used her practice time more than any of the other girls on the team.

I do not take these recommendations lightly. I believe Carson is one of the most passionate people I have ever seen. She loves hard work and golf and her time working at the television station. I believe she can do whatever she sets her mind to doing. She is one of the most dedicated, hard working person I have ever seen. She also has a great support system in her family. They all support each other and love each other. If there are any other questions you have, please feel free to contact me with those questions.

Yours truly,

Lloyd McWilliams, PGA, CI
Rockford Park District junior instructor
Former Rockford University Men's Head Golf Coach
Illinois PGA Section 2013 Junior Golf Leader award winner
U.S. Kids Certified Kids Instructor
2012 and 2014 U.S. Kids Top 50 Kids Teacher, honorable mention
2013 U.S. Kids Top 50 Kids Teacher Award Winner
Illinois PGA Section 2018 Distinguished Service Award Winner
Founder of the Lloyd McWilliams Winter Golf Academy
815-621-2401